

JACK FAMILY.

AT THE commencement of the Revolutionary War, one of the worthy and patriotic citizens of the little town of Charlotte in Mecklenburg, North Carolina, was PATRICK JACK. He was a native of Ireland, and emigrated to America, with several brothers, about 1730. He married Lillis McAdoo, of the same race, who is represented to have been by all who knew her as "one of the best of women," having an amiable disposition, frequently dispensing charities to the poor, and truly pious. Her Christian name, LILLIS, in subsequent years, was softened into Lillie, by many of her descendants in adopting it. The descent of Patrick Jack is traceable to noble ancestors, one of whom was a ministerial sufferer in the reign of Charles II in 1661. In that year, that despotic monarch, who, according to one of his own satirists, "Never said a foolish thing, nor ever did a wise one," ejected from their benefices or livings, under Jeremy Taylor, thirteen ministers of the Presbytery of Lagan, in the northern part of Ireland, for their non-conformity to the Church of England. The Puritans of England were called to the same trial, in August, 1662, and in the following October the same scene of heroic suffering was exhibited in Scotland.

Among the honored names of the thirteen ejected ministers were * * * * * William Jack, ancestor of Patrick Jack, of Charlotte, N. C., Charles Jack, of Chambersburg, Penn., and others, whose descendants are now found in ten or twelve states of the American Union.

In the list of tax-payers for Chambersburg, Pa., during the later half of the last century, the "Chief Burgess," or Mayor of that city, informs the author the name of Jack (especially John, James, Charles, and William) is of frequent occurrence; but at the present time, not one of the name is to be found there. One of these, (James) probably a nephew of Patrick and Charles Jack, served five years with distinction in the Revolutionary Army, and others are traditionally spoken of as actively engaged in the same patriotic duty. Several of the elder members of the family are buried in the graveyard of Chambersburg, others in Williamsport, Md., and elsewhere in Western Pennsylvania.

Several years previous to the Revolution, there also came over from the north of Ireland to America, at least two brothers of the name of Jack, distant relatives of Patrick and James Jack, and settled in Western Pennsylvania.

When the town of Westmoreland (Hannastown) was burned by the Indians in 1783, one of this family distinguished himself by saving the lives of the women and children. After the burning of that place the name of the town was changed to Greensburg, and a new location selected on land donated by William Jack, who had become quite wealthy, and one of the Associated Judges of Westmoreland County. He had five sons, four of whom died bachelors; the elder married, but none of his descendants are now (1876) living except a grandson, (William Jack) who resides near Greensburg, Pa. The only daughter of Judge William Jack, married John Cust, who fled from Ireland soon after the rebellion of 1798. About 1760, animated with the hope of more rapidly improving his worldly condition, Patrick Jack joined the great tide of emigration to the Southern colonies and shortly after his arrival in North Carolina purchased a tract of land between Grand and Second Creeks, in the Cathey settlement (now (Thyatira) in Rowan County. After remaining there for about two years, he sold his land, and moved to the adjoining County of Mecklenburg. Here, by strict economy and industry, he was "blest in his basket and his store." and enabled to make more enlarged possessions. This improvement in his pecuniary condition and prosperity may be inferred from the fact that in 1775, and a few years subsequently, he and his eldest son, Captain James Jack, who, about this time united in business with his father, became owners of some of the finest lots, or rather blocks, in Charlotte. Among the valuable lots they are recorded as owning, may be briefly named: No. 25, the present Irwin Corner; No. 26, the Parks lot;

No. 27, the whole space, or double block, from the Irwin corner to the Court House lot; No. 29, the space from the Parks lot to the corner embracing the Brown property, and several lots on Trade street, opposite the First Presbyterian Church. On one of these last named lots (the old Elms property, on the corner next to the Court House) Patrick Jack and his son, Captain James Jack, resided when the delegates from the militia districts of the county assembled, on the 19th and 20th of May, 1775, and kept a public house of entertainment. Here Patrick Jack, on suitable occasions, was accustomed to "crack" many an Irish joke, to the infinite delight of his numerous visitors; and by his ready wit, genial good humor and pleasantries, greatly contributed to the reputation of his house, and inculcated his own patriotic principles. The house soon became the favorite place of resort for the students of the collegiate institute known as "Queen's Museum," and of other ardent spirits of the county, to discuss the political issues of that exciting period, all foreboding the approach of a mighty revolution.

Patrick Jack had four sons, James, John, Samuel and Robert, and five daughters, Charity, Jane, Mary, Margaret and Lillis, named in the order of their ages. Captain James Jack, the eldest son, married Margaret Houston, on the 20th. of November, 1766.

On the 2nd. of October, 1768, Captain James Jack, as stated in his own family register, moved to his own place, on the head of the Catawba River, then receiving a considerable emigration. He had five children: 1. Cynthia, born on the 20th. of September, 1767. 2. Patrick, born on the 27th. of September 1769. 3. William Houston, born on the 6th. of June, 1771. 4. Archibald, born on the 20th. of April, 1773, (died young); and 5. James, born on the 20th. of September, 1775.

On the 4th of August, 1772, Captain Jack left his mountain home, and moved to the residence of his father, Patrick Jack, in Mecklenburg County. On the 16th. of February, 1773, he and his father moved from the country, where they had been temporarily sojourning, into "Charlotte Town," prospered in business, and soon became useful and influential citizens.

On the 26th. of September, 1780, Lord Cornwallis, elated with his victory at Camden, entered Charlotte, with the confident expectation of restoring North Carolina to the British Crown.

Patrick Jack, was then an old and infirm man, having given up the chief control of his public house, to his son, Captain James Jack; but neither age nor infirmity could enlist the sympathies of the British soldiery. The patriotic character of the house had become extensively known through Tory information, and its destruction was consequently a "foregone conclusion." The British soldiers removed its aged owner from the feather bed upon which he was lying, emptied its contents into the street, and then set the house on fire.

The reason assigned for this incendiary act was, "all of the old Jack's sons were in the rebel army," and he himself had been an active promoter of American independence.

The loss to Patrick Jack of his dwelling house and much furniture, accumulated through many years of patient toil and industry, was a severe one. The excitement of the burning scene, consequent exposure, and great nervous shock to a system already debilitated with disease, a few months afterwards brought to the grave this veteran patriot. His aged partner survived him a few years. Both were consistent members of the Presbyterian Church, and their mortal remains now repose in the old graveyard at Charlotte.

By the last will and testament of Patrick Jack, made on the 19th. of May, 1780, he devised the whole of his personal estate and the "undivided benefit of his house and lots to his beloved wife during her life-time." After her death they were directed to be sold, and the proceeds to be divided among his five married daughters, viz: Charity Dysart, Jane Barnett, Mary Alexander, Margaret Wilson, and Lillie Nicholson. James Jack and Joseph Nicholson were appointed executors. It is related of Dr. Thomas Henderson, a former venerable citizen of Charlotte, that, on his death-bed, he requested to be buried by the side of Patrick Jack, "one of the best men he had ever known."

At the Convention of Delegates in Charlotte on the 19th. and 20th. of May, 1775, Captain James Jack was one of the deeply interested spectators, and shared in the patriotic feelings of that ever memorable occasion. He was then about forty-three years of age—brave, energetic and ready to engage in any duty having for its object the welfare and independence of his country. After the passage of the patriotic resolution, elsewhere given in this volume, constituting the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, Captain Jack, for his well-known energy, bravery and determination of character was selected to be the bearer of them to Congress, then in session in Philadelphia. Accordingly as soon as the necessary preparations for traveling could be made, he set out from Charlotte on that long, lonesome and perilous journey, on horse back. There were then nowhere in the American colonies, stages or hacks to facilitate and expedite the weary traveler. Express Messengers were alone employed for the rapid transmission of all important intelligence. On the evening of the first day he reached Salisbury, forty miles from Charlotte, before the General Court, then in session, had adjourned. Upon his arrival, Colonel Kennon, an influential member of the Court, who knew the object of Captain Jack's mission, procured from him the copy of the Mecklenburg resolutions of independence he had in charge, and read them aloud in open court. All was silence and all apparent approval (inténlique ora tenebant) as these earliest key-notes of freedom resounded through the hall of the old Court House in Salisbury. There sat around in sympathizing composure, those sterling patriots, Moses Winslow, Waightstill Avery, John Breward, William Sharpe, Griffith Rutherford, Matthew Locke, Samuel Young, Adlai Osborn, James Brandon, and many others, either members of the Court, or of the County "Committee of Safety." The only marked opposition proceeded from two lawyers, John Dunn and Benjamin Booth Boote, who pronounced the resolutions treasonable, and said Captain Jack ought to be detained. These individuals had previously expressed sentiments "inimical to the American cause." As soon as knowledge of their avowed sentiments and proposed detention of Captain Jack reached Charlotte, the patriotic vigilance of the friends of liberty was actively aroused, and a party of ten or twelve armed horsemen promptly volunteered to proceed to Salisbury, arrest said Dunn and Boote, and bring them before the Committee of Safety of Mecklenburg for trial. This was accordingly done (George Graham, living near Charlotte, being one of the number), and both being found guilty of conduct inimical to the cause of American freedom, were transported, first to Camden, and afterward to Charleston, S. C. They never returned to North Carolina, but after the war, it is reported, settled in Florida, and died there, it is hoped not only repentant of their sins, as all should be, but with chastened notions of the reality and benefits of American independence.

On the next morning, Captain Jack resumed his journey from Salisbury, occasionally passing through neighborhoods, in and beyond the limits of North Carolina, infested with enraged Tories, but intent on his appointed mission, he faced all dangers, and finally reached Philadelphia in safety.

Upon his arrival he immediately obtained an interview with the North Carolina delegates (Caswell, Hooper and Hewes), and, after a little conversation on the state of the country, then agitating all minds, Captain Jack drew from his pocket the Mecklenburg resolutions of the 20th. of May, 1775, with the remark: "Here, gentlemen, is a paper that I have been instructed to deliver to you, with the request that you should lay the same before Congress."

After the North Carolina delegates had carefully read the Mecklenburg resolutions, and approved of their patriotic sentiments, so forcibly expressed, they informed Captain Jack they would keep the paper and show it to several of their friends, remarking, at the same time, they did not think Congress was then prepared to act upon so important a measure as absolute independence. On the next day, Captain Jack had another interview with the North Carolina delegates. They informed him that they had consulted with several members of Congress, (including Hancock, Jay and Jefferson), and that all agreed, while they approved of the patriotic spirit of the Mecklenburg resolutions, it would be premature to lay them officially before the House, as they still entertained some hopes of reconciliation with England. It was clearly perceived by the North Carolina delegates and other members whom they consulted, that the citizens of Mecklenburg County were in advance of the general sentiment of Congress on the subject of independence; the phantasy of "reconciliation" still held forth its seductive allurements in 1775; and even during a portion of 1776; and hence, no record was made, or vote taken on the patriotic resolutions of Mecklenburg, and they became concealed from view in the blaze of the National Declaration bursting forth on the 4th. of July, 1776, which only re-echoed and reaffirmed the truth and potency of sentiments proclaimed in Charlotte on the 20th of May, 1775.

Captain Jack finding the darling object of his long and toilsome journey could not then be accomplished and that Congress was not prepared to vote on so bold a measure as absolute independence, just before leaving Philadelphia for home, somewhat excited, addressed the North Carolina delegates, and several other members of Congress, in the following patriotic words: "Gentlemen, you may debate here about 'reconciliation,' and memorialize your king, but, bear it in mind, Mecklenburg owes no allegiance to, and is separated from the crown of Great Britain forever."

On the breaking out of hostilities with the mother country, no portion of the Confederacy was more forward in fulfilling the pledge of "life, fortune and sacred honor," in the achievement of liberty, previously made, than Mecklenburg and several adjacent counties. Upon the first call for troops, Captain Jack entered the service in command of a company, and acted in that capacity, with distinguished bravery, throughout the war, under Colonels Polk, Alexander and other officers. He uniformly declined promotion when tendered, there being a strong reciprocal attachment between himself and his command, which he highly appreciated, and did not wish to sunder. At the commencement of the war he was in "easy" and rather affluent circumstances—at its close, comparatively a poor man.

Prompted by patriotic feelings for the final prosperity of his country, still struggling for independence, he loaned to the State of North Carolina, in her great pecuniary need, $4,000, for which, unfortunately, he has never received a cent in return. As a partial compensation for his services, the State paid him a land warrant, which he placed in the hands of a Mr. Martin, a particular friend, to be laid at his discretion. Martin moved to Tennessee, and died there, but no account of the warrant could afterward be obtained.

Soon after the war he sold his house and lots in Charlotte, and moved with his family to Wilkes County, Georgia. Here he is represented by those who knew him, as being a "model farmer," with barns well filled, and surrounded with all the evidences of great industry, order and abundance. Here too he was blessed in enjoying for many years, the ministerial instructions of the Rev. Francis Cummings, a distinguished Presbyterian clergyman, who at the youthful age of eighteen, joined his command in Mecklenburg County, and had followed him to his new home in Georgia—formerly a gallant soldier for his country's rights, but now transformed into a "soldier of the cross," on Christian duty in his Heavenly Master's service.

The latter years of Captain Jack's life were spent under the care of his second son, William H. Jack, long a successful and most worthy merchant of Augusta, Ga. In 1813 or 1814, Captain Jack moved from Wilkes to Elbert County, of the same State. There being no Presbyterian Church in reach, of which he had been for years a devout and consistent member, he joined the Methodist Church, with which his children had previously united. He was extremely fond of meeting with old friends, and of narrating incidents of the Revolution in which he had actively participated, and for its success freely contributed of his substance. In the serenity of a good old age, protracted beyond the usual boundaries of life, he cared but little for things of this world, and took great delight in reading his Bible, and deriving from its sacred pages those Christian consolations which alone can yield true comfort and happiness, and cheer the pathway of our earthly pilgrimage to the tomb. He met his approaching end with calm resignation, and died on the 18th. of December, 1822, in the ninety-first year of his age. His wife, the partner of his joys and his sorrows through a long, and eventful life, survived him about two years, and then passed away in peace.

CYNTHIA JACK, eldest child and only daughter of Captain James Jack, married A. S. Cosby, and settled in Mississippi. After his death the widow and family settled in Louisiana, about 1814. Their descendants were:

1. Margaret. 2. Cynthia. 3. James, and
4. Dr. Charles Cosby. Patrick Jack, eldest son of Captain James Jack, was Colonel of the Eighth Regiment United States Infantry, in the war of 1812, stationed at Savannah. He sustained an elevated position in society, frequently represented Elbert County in the State Senate, and died in 1820. His children were:
1. Patrick. 2. William H.; and 3. James W. Jack. Patrick Jack, the eldest son, married Miss Spencer, and in turn had two daughters, Harriet and Margaret, and six sons:
1. James. 2. Wm. H. 3. Partick C. 4. Spencer H. 5. Abner; and 6. Churchill Jack. Abner died several years ago in Mississippi, a planter by occupation and a man of wealth.

James Jack, eldest son of Colonel Patrick Jack, married in 1822, Ann Scott Gray, who died in 1838. In 1847, he married Mary Jane Witherspoon, having by the first wife ten, and by the second, eleven children, of whom at present (1876) twelve are living. In 1823, he moved to Jefferson County, Alabama, and one year afterward to Hale County, in the same State, where he ended his days. During the fall of the last year (1875), the author received from him two interesting letters respecting the history of his ever-memorable grandfather, Captain James Jack, after his removal from North Carolina to Georgia. But alas! the uncertainty of human life. Before the year closed, this venerable, intelligent and truly Christian man was numbered with the dead. He was a successful farmer, the prudent counsellor of his neighborhood, good to the poor, dispensing his charities with a liberal hand, and was universally beloved by all who knew him. On the 27th. of November, he had a severe stroke of paralysis, from which he never recovered.

On the 27th. of December, 1875; like a sheaf, ripe in its season, he was cut down, and gathered to his Fathers, quietly passing away in the seventy-sixth year of his age, with the fond hope of a blissful immortality beyond the grave.

Churchill Jack, youngest son of Colonel Patrick Jack, is a farmer in Arkansas, and the only one of this family now (1876) living. William H., Patrick C., and Spencer H. Jack, all young and adventurous spirits, emigrated from Alabama to Texas, in 1831, and cast their lots with the little American colony which was then just beginning to establish itself. They were all three lawyers by profession, and took an active part in the difficulties with Mexico, and were sure to result in open hostilities and the independence of Texas. Spencer H. died young and without issue.

Patrick C. Jack played a prominent part in one of the earliest acts "rebellion" against the Mexican authorities. He, Travis and Edward, at Anahuac, smarting under the tyranny of the Mexican General, Bradburn, then commanding the post, denounced and rebelled against his usurpations and oppressions. For this they were seized and imprisoned by Bradburn, and held as captive traitors, until released by a company of armed Texans, who demanded their immediate surrender of a fight. Bradburn, not having a particular fondness for leaden arguments, and well knowing the message meant business, reluctantly yielded to the tern demand. But this chivalric rescue, as might be expected, was regarded by Mexico, as treason, and war soon afterward followed.

After the close of the Mexican War, Patrick C. Jack returned to his profession, which he pursued successfully. At the time of his death, in 1844, tho still a young man, he was one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the Republic of Texas. His brother, Wm. H. Jack, also participated prominently in council, and in the field in the Revolution of Texas, and served as a private in the battle of San Jacinto, which sealed the Independence of the "Lone Star" Republic. He achieved distinction in his profession as a lawyer and advocate, and served repeatedly as Representative and Senator in the Congress of the young Republic. Under President Burnet's administration he became Secretary of State. He too died in 1844, not having attained his fortieth year. He left a widow and three children, two of the latter being daughters. His elder daughter being the wife of Hon. W. P. Ballinger, of the City of Galveston, lately appointed to the bench of the Supreme Court of Texas, which position he decline. His second daughter (now deceased) married the Hon. Grey M. Bryan, of Galveston, who represented his district in Congress before the war, and was Speaker of the House of Representatives of Texas, in 1875.

COLONEL THOMAS M. JACK, only son of Wm. H. Jack, and great-grandson of Captain James Jack of Mecklenburg memory, is an eminent lawyer and advocate, also of Galveston (of the firm of Ballinger, Jack & Mott), to whom the author acknowledges his indebtedness for many particulars respecting the Texan members of the Jack family.

WILLIAM HOUSTON JACK, second son of Captain James Jack, was one of the first settlers, and a successful merchant of Augusta, Ga. After his withdrawal from the mercantile business, he settled in Wilkes County, taking care of his aged father and mother till their death. He married Frances Cummings, a daughter of the Rev. Francis Cummings, one of the witnesses of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence. He was universally beloved by all who knew him, and sustained through life a character of unsullied integrity. He left one son, William Cummings Jack, a teacher by profession, a fine classical scholar, and a gentleman of culture and great moral worth. He is now, (1876), residing with his second son, William H. Jack, a distinguished lawyer (of the firm "Jack & Pierson") of Natchitoches, La. His eldest son, Dr. Samuel Jack, is an eminent physician, of extensive practice, residing in Columbia County, Arkansas. Two other sons are industrious farmers, and all are pursuing successfully their several vocations in life.

For the patriotic services, civil and military, performed by the different members of the Jack family, Texas, in her formation state, honored one of her counties with their name.

JAMES W. JACK, third son of Captain James Jack, married Annie Barnett, a daughter of John Barnett and Ann Spratt. He was a farmer by profession, of unblemished character, and extensive influence, residing and ending his days in Wilkes County, Georgia. He had the following children: 1. Samuel T. 2. Jane. 3. James, (killed at the massacre of the Alamo, under Colonel Farnim). 4. Lillis. 5. Patrick, and 6. Cynthia Jack. Samuel T. married Martha Webster, of Mississippi; Jane Jack married Dr. James Jarrott; Lillis Jack married Osborn Edwards, Esq., and Patrick Jack married Emily Hanson, of Texas.

JOHN JACK, second son of Patrick Jack, of Charlotte, was also a soldier of the Revolution, and commanded an artillery company. He lived in the Sugar Creek neighborhood, and married, 1st: Miss Knight of Mecklenburg County, by whom he had two children. 1. Eliza D. Jack, who married the Rev. Mr. Hodge, a Presbyterian minister, and settled in Athens, Ga., and 2. James Jack, who died when a young man. A few years after her death, he married Margaret Stewart, of Philadelphia, Pa., by whom he had five children: 1. Samuel Stewart. 2. John McCormick. 3. William D. 4. Mary E., and 5. Amanda M. Jack. Samuel S. Jack, married Elizabeth Meridith, of Walton County, Georgia, in 1831. None of the other children ever married. He had five children: 1. William Howard. 2. Amanda E. 3. James Mortimer. 4. Joseph Henry; and 5. Sarah M. Jack. Of these William Howard Jack, in 1860, married Mary Lunsdale, by whom he had five children. He was a printer and editor, and highly respected by all who knew him. He died in 1870, in Rome, Ga., aged forty-two years. His son, James Mortimer Jack was killed in the late war. Amanda E. Jack, a worthy lady, is now, (1876), living in the country with her brother, Joseph Henry Jack.

ROBERT JACK, the fourth and youngest son of Patrick Jack, of Charlotte, remained in Chambersville, Pa., where his father had resided many years previous to his removal to North Carolina. He had the following children: 1. James. 2. John. 3. Cynthia; and 4. Margaret Jack. John Jack was the only one of this family who married. He was born in Chambersville, on the 29th of December, 1763. At the age of sixteen he went to Baltimore, engaged as a clerk in a mercantile house, and there acquired those correct business habits and educational training which qualified him for future usefulness. Near the close of the last century, when quite a young man, he settled in Romney, Hampshire County, Va. He there became a successful merchant, and sustained, through a long and busy life, an unblemished reputation for honesty, integrity and general uprightness of character. He married Rebecca Singleton, an estimable lady who survived him a few years.

In 1823, he was appointed cashier of the Romney Branch of the Valley Bank of Virginia, which position he held until his death, with distinguished ability. The former intelligent mayor of Romney, (A. P. White, Esq.) in writing to the author says: "John Jack, when young, was of a gay and festive disposition. After he joined the church he sobered down to great calmness and evenness. He was always exceedingly neat in his person, courteous in his manners, and kind and charitable to the poor. He bore through life the character of an earnest, honest, upright man of business, was an Elder of the Presbyterian Church, and a good Christian." He died on the 28th. of September, 1837, in the seventy-fourth year of his age. He had the following children: 1. Robert Y. 2. Carlton T. 3. James R. 4. John. 5. Margaret. 6. Juliette M. 7. John G., and 8. Edward W. Jack. The last named son is now (1876) the only one of the family living. Robert Y. Jack, settled in Winchester, Va., and engaged in merchandising. In the war of 1812, he raised a company which was stationed at Craney Island, and participated in the battle at that place.

Robert Y. Jack died near Charleston, Jefferson County, Va., in 1834, leaving an only child, Frances Rebecca, who married Thomas J. Manning, of the U. S. Navy. They both died previous to the Confederate War, leaving three sons: 1. Charles J. 2. George Upshur, and 3. Frank Jack Manning. Each of these brave youths joined the Confederate Army, all under the age of eighteen years. George Upshur was killed in the cavalry charge under General Stewart, at Brandy Station. Frank Jack was shot through the body, but recovered of his severe wound and continued in the army. They all three served under General (Stonewall) Jackson, through his campaigns, and after his death under General Early, John G. Jack, settled in Louisville, Ky., and died there, leaving three daughters and one son, Robert Bruce Jack. Edward W. Jack, youngest son of John Jack, of Romney, now lives near Salem, Roanoke County, Va., in the quiet fruition of all that pertains to an honorable bachelor's life. All the members of this family have sustained exemplary characters, and now occupy fair and eminent positions in society. Charity Jack, eldest daughter of Patrick Jack, of Charlotte, married Dr. Cornelius Dysart, a distinguished physician and surgeon of the Revolutionary Army. The Dysart family at that time, resided in Mecklenburg County. Dr. Dysart is said to have built the first house on the "Irwin Corner," assisted by his brother-in-law. Captain Jack, who owned the lot till his removal to Georgia, shortly after the war. Dr. Dysart died comparatively young, leaving a widow and two children, James and Robert Dysart, who settled in Georgia. Of their subsequent history little is known. Jane (or Jean) Jack, second daughter of Patrick Jack, married William Barnett, son of John Barnett and Ann Spratt, of Scotch-Irish descent. The name Spratt is generally spelled "Sprot" or "Sproat," in the old records. Thomas Spratt is said to have been the first person who crossed the Yadkin River with wheels, and his daughter, Ann, the first child born in the beautiful campaign country between the Yadkin and the Catawba rivers. He first intended to settle on Rocky River (now in Cabarrus County), but an Indian disturbance occurring there near the time of his arrival, induced him to select a home in the vicinity of the place which afterward became the "town of Charlotte." At his humble dwelling, one mile and a half south of Charlotte, was held the first Court of Mecklenburg County. Abraham Alexander, the chairman of the Mecklenburg Convention of the 20th. of May, 1775; and Colonel Thomas Polk, its "herald of freedom," on the same occasion, were then prominent and influential members of this primitive body of county magistrates. Near the residence of Thomas Spratt is one of the oldest private burial grounds in the county, in which his mortal remains repose. Here are found the grave stones of several members of the Spratt, Barnett, and Jack families, who intermarried; also those of the Bingham, McKnights and a few others. On the headstone of Mary Barnett, wife of Wm. Barnett, it is recorded, she died on the 4th of October, 1764, aged forty-five years. A hickory tree, ten or twelve inches in diameter, is now growing on this grave, casting around its beneficent shade. The primitive forest growth, once partially cut down, is here fast assuming its original sway, and peacefully overshadowing the mortal remains of these early sleepers in this ancient graveyard.

The descendants of William Barnett and Jane Jack were: 1. Annie Barnett, married James Jack, third son of Captain James Jack, of Mecklenburg memory, whose genealogy has been previously given. 2. Samuel Barnett, married, 1st: Eliza Joyner; descendants: 1. Jane Barnett married A. S. Wingfield. 2. Sarah J. Barnett, married Alexander Pope, Sr. Descendants of Samuel Barnett (second marriage) and Elizabeth Worsham were: 1. Samuel Barnett (Washington, Ga.), married Elizabeth A. Stone. Descendants: 1. Annie Barnett, married Rev. William S. Bean. 2. Frank W. 3. Samuel (Davidson College). 4. Osborne S. 5. Edward A. 6. Hattie A.; and 7. Susan Barnett.

The descendants of John Jack and Mary Barnett were: 1. Ann Jack, married Moses Wiley. 2. Mary A. Jack, married John J. Barnett. 3. Dr. Thomas Jack. 4. John Jack. 5. Samuel Jack, married Annie Leslie. 6. Susan Jack, married Alexander Bowie, formerly Chancellor of Alabama.

The descendants of Moses Wiley and Ann Jack were: 1. Leroy M. Wiley. 2. Mary Wiley, married Thomas Baxter. 3. Thomas Wiley. 4. Eliza Wiley, married Mr. Carnes. 5. Sarah Ann, married John R. Hays. 6. Laird Wiley; and 7. Jack Wiley.

The descendants of Susan Barnett and George W. Smart were five children, of whom only two arrived at the age of maturity, Albert W. and Thomas B. Smart. George W. Smart represented Mecklenburg County in the House of Commons in 1805, and again in 1808. He died in May 1810. Mrs. Smart survived her husband many years, and was one of the most remarkable women of her age. She was long known and highly esteemed in Mecklenburg, and surrounding country for her general intelligence, ardent piety, and retentive memories of Revolutionary events. At the great gathering of delegates and people in Charlotte, on the 20th. of May, 1775, she was present (then thirteen years old), and still retained a distinct recollection of some of the thrilling scenes of that memorable occasion, not the least of which was "the throwing up of hats," in the universal outburst of applause, when the resolutions of independence were read by Colonel Thomas Polk, from the Court-house steps. She died on the 28th. of November, 1851, aged ninety years, and is buried, with other members of the family, in a private cemetery on her own farm, nine miles from Charlotte, on the Camden road. It should be stated, the grandfather of L. M. Wiley and others, (John Jack), was a cousin and not a brother, as some have supposed, of Captain James Jack, of Charlotte.

Our prescribed limits forbid a more extended genealogical notice of the Barnett family and their collateral connections, many of whom performed a conspicuous part in the Revolutionary War. Captain William Barnett was a bold, energetic officer, and was frequently engaged, with his brothers, and other ardent spirits of Mecklenburg, in that species of partisan warfare which struck terror into the Tory ranks, checked their atrocities, and gave celebrity to the dashing exploits of Colonel Sumpter and his brave associates.

MARY JACK, third daughter of Patrick Jack, of Charlotte, married Captain Robert Alexander, of Lincoln County, who emigrated from Pennsylvania to North Carolina about 1760. He commanded a company during the Revolution, in the Cherokee expedition, under General Rutherford; acted for several years as Commissary, and performed other minor, but important trusts for the county. He was one of the early band of patriots who met at Newbern on the 25th. of August, 1774, and again attended the Convention at Hillsboro, on the 21st. of August, 1775. After the war, he settled on his farm, one mile northwest of Tuckasege Ford, on the Catawba River. His residence was long a general stopping place for travelers, and painted red—hence, it was widely known as the "Red House Place."

He was elected to the State Legislature consecutively from 1781 to 1787; and acted for many years as one of the magistrates of the county, showing the general acceptance with which his services were held. He died in 1813, aged about seventy years, and is buried in Goshen graveyard, Gaston County, North Carolina. His descendants by the first wife, Mary Jack, were: 1. Margaret, married

Judge Samuel Lowrie. 2. Lillis, married Captain James Martin. 3. Robert W., married Louisa Moore. 4. Mary, married (1) James J. Scott, and (2nd.) General John Moore. 5. Annie, married John Sumpter (nephew General Sumpter.)

His descendants by his second wife, Margaret Reily, were: 1. Eliza. 2. Evaline. 3. Amanda, married Dr. J. C. Rudisill, of Lincoln.

Descendants of Judge Lowrie and Margaret Alexander were: 1. Mary, married Dr. David R. Dunlap, of Charlotte. 2. Eliza, died unmarried. 3. Margaret, died unmarried. 4. Lillis, married B. Oates. 5. Robert B., married Ann Sloan. 6. Samuel, married Mary Johnson.

MARGARET JACK, fourth daughter of Patrick Jack, married Samuel Wilson, of Mecklenburg. (For his descendants see "Genealogy of Samuel Wilson, Sr.")

LILLIS JACK, the fifth and youngest daughter of Patrick Jack, married Joseph Nicholson. He left the state, and is reported as having a family of six children, but of their subsequent history, little is known.

COLONEL PATRICK JACK, a brave and meritorious officer under the Colonial Government, and during the Revolutionary war, was the son of Charles Jack, who lived on the Conococheague River, near Chambersburg, Pa., and was probably the brother of Patrick

Jack, of Charlotte, N. C., whose family history has just been given. Colonel Jack lived an active and adventurous life, and was born about 1730. He was much engaged, when a young man, in assisting to subdue the Indians in Pennsylvania, and commanding a company of Rangers, under General Braddock and Washington, in the Indian and French War of 1755. He also commanded a regiment, and participated actively in the Revolutionary War. He was in the Cherokee country many years anterior to the Revolution.

He was at the massacre of the garrison in Fort London, on the Tennessee River in 1760, and was one of the three persons who survived, his life having been saved through the influence of the Indian Chief, Atta-Kulla, the "Little Carpenter." He had three children: Mary, Jane and John Finley Jack. John was educated at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa. He studied law, and emigrated to Knoxville, then the capital of Tennessee, where he soon acquired eminence, and a lucrative practice in his profession. He afterward removed to Rutledge, in Grainger County, East Tennessee, where he associated himself in the same profession with his brother-in-law, the late General John Cocke, a son of General William Cocke, one of the distinguished characters in the early history of Tennessee. He took a prominent part in the politics of the country, filled the offices of Circuit Clerk, State's Attorney, served several times in both branches of the Legislature, and was finally elected Circuit Judge, which position he held for many years. When the infirmities of old age impeded his activity and usefulness, he retired from public life to his plantation near Bean's Station, East Tennessee, where he ended his days.

He was a profound lawyer, a judge of great purity of character, of remarkable discrimination and integrity of purpose, evinced through a long, useful, and honorable life. He was a hard student, possessed fine colloquial powers, and was a man of eminent learning and research.

JUDGE JOHN F. JACK, married Elizabeth next to the youngest daughter of General William Cocke, previously mentioned, who was a Captain in the Revolutionary War, a companion of Daniel Boone from Western North Carolina across the Alleghany Mountains to the "wilderness of Kentucky," a prominent actor in the establishment of the "Frankland Government," one of the first Senators to Congress from the new State of Tennessee, and afterward, one of the Circuit Judges of that State. He served in the Legislatures of Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Mississippi. At the advanced age of sixty-five years, he volunteered in the war of 1812, and distinguished himself for his personal courage. He died on the 8th. of August, 1828, in the eighty-seventh year of his age, universally lamented, and is buried in Columbus, Miss.

It has been previously stated that Colonel Patrick Jack, the father of Judge John F.

Jack, led an active and adventurous life. One of these adventures will now be narrated.

In Dr. Ramsey's "Annals of Tennessee," page 68, we have this record: "A grant, signed Arthur Dobbs, Governor of North Carolina; William Beamer, Senior, Superintendent and Deputy Adjutant in and for the Cherokee Nation; and William Beamer, Junior Interpreter; and the "Little Carpenter," half king of the Cherokee Nation of the over-hill towns; and Matthew Toole, Interpreter, made to Captain Patrick Jack, of the Province of Pennsylvania, is recorded in the Register's office of Knox County, Tennessee. It purports to have been made at a council held at Tennessee River, on the 1st. of March, 1757. The consideration is Four Hundred Dollars, and conveys to Captain Jack fifteen miles square south of the Tennessee River. The grant itself, confirmatory of the purchase by Jack, is dated at a general council, met at the Catawba River, on the 7th. of May, 1762, and it witnessed by Nathaniel Alexander.

COLONEL PATRICK JACK, the father of Judge John F. Jack, died in Chambersburg, Pa., on the 25th. of January, 1821, aged ninety-one years. His daughter, Jane Stewart, died in 1853, also aged ninety-one years. His daughter, Mary (never married), died on the 29th. of May, 1862, aged eighty-five years.

The family of Judge John F. Jack, consisted of eight children, of whom, at the present time (1876), only four are living, viz:

Martha Mariah (Mrs. Dr. Rhoton), of Morristown, East Tennessee; William Pinkney Jack, of Russellville, Ala.; John F. Jack, of West Point, Miss., both worthy and eminent lawyers in their respective location; and Sarah Anne (Mrs. Dr. Carriger), of Morristown, Tenn. Few persons in the early history of East Tennessee were held in as great estimation, and filled with universal acceptance as many important positions of public trust as Judge John F. Jack. The county seat of justice of Campbell County, Jackboro, was named in his honor, and his descendants should hold in cherished remembrance his purity of life and unsullied integrity of character.
